

Anna Lee Douglass

First Lady of Agriculture

State of West Virginia

Being raised on a farm and becoming a 4-H All-Star at a young age helped instill the moral traits that define Anna Lee today - trustworthiness, leadership, quiet determination and a strong will. Acting as the co-owner and operator of Douglass Farm, and as a fixture in the agriculture community, she frequently works with her local CEOS Club and the Mason County Extension Service.

She takes great pride and joy in preserving the bounties of the garden so her family can enjoy home-grown goodness throughout the year. Anna Lee has had the unique opportunity to share her love of agriculture across the state and nation.
