Women in agriculture was instilled in me as a child by my mother. Home gardening was a mainstay and a necessity in my family and the women did the gardening and preserving of the food. As I grew older and raised a family it remained a very important part of my life knowing that I was feeding my family healthy foods.

I garden on a small scale with my husband and have enough to share and feed us all year. I use some of my fruits and vegetables in my home-based canning business... Ordinary Evelyn's. I once read a quote that said "if you have a plot of ground and didn't have a garden it ought to be a sin."
